WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 29

BEFORE MARRIAGE AND AFTER.—Before marriage the young girl will generally know or have some idea when the young gentleman will come to see her; she takes great care to look neat and pleasing, waiting to receive him in a tastefully arranged room. And what of the "you?" No matter how much "out of sorts," (as he is apt to term it) he may feel, he will dress in his best, look his very best, and start for the home of his love. They meet with a clasp of hands and a pleasant smile, have a cordial evening's visit, then part with a kind good night. I do not say this is wrong if there is true love in it; but how different it is from the home in after years! We too often miss the sweet and pleasing appearance of the young girl in the wife. And the woman whose only aim was to please his lady love, now seems to have forgotten all the little courtesies and gentle attentions that are needed just as much to the husband as in the lover to make him happy. His looks many other things to look after; and utters harsh and thoughtless words. You may see the wife of only a few months, is a shabby dress, hair uncombed, the blouse is disorderly, and partly torn for her husband to come home. It is no wonder that he is unhappy, and my try to give a little advice sometimes. I make no excuse for her. She may have plenty to do, and more than she can accomplish; still she can, if she will, always look neat, and make her husband with a smile. On the other hand the wife may try hard to keep the sweet, girlish ways of other days about her, but she is徒徒 with think to himself, "Now we are married, and Mary must not expect to be the same as before." I have no time for loving ways, now there is so much resting upon me, as the head of the house." He takes no notice of the neatly kept room; and the nice dinner just to his taste, and the loving wife who always meets him at the door with a smile of welcome home.

CHAMPAIGNE SPARKLING CIDER, at McBURNEY'S,

The greatest joy of this season is the moving of the winter's store. None of the other pleasures of May in the spring house cleaning can compare with this event, which till the family look forward to with intense expectation, and which never fails to put all in the best of humor, by having them stored away at STANSBURY'S CENTRAL STOVE HOUSE, you will save much money, and have them to good order to put up when the cold weather comes. Remember the place—McBurney's building, corner King and Washington sts.
